

Where's PHido?

And why is he there?

He's Virtually Everywhere!

PHido is the University Hygienic Laboratory's (UHL's) public health mascot, our Public Health "lab." You can find him throughout our new interactive course that is designed especially to teach sentinel laboratorians about Iowa's public health laboratory system and the national laboratory structure.

From the comfort of your favorite office chair, PHido walks you through four narrated, computer-based modules:

- Getting to Know "U" HL
- Sentinel Labs and Disease Reporting
- Antimicrobial Testing
- The National Laboratory System

You can bone up on your knowledge of the public health laboratory system by going to the UHL website (www.uhl.uiowa.edu) to find a link to the course or by going directly to this site: <http://www.training-source.org/Courses/Labs/Intro/>. Take a walk with PHido today to find out how you fit into the National Laboratory System.

Take the lead in your lab with this important information from PHido and his friends at the UHL.

Can you find all nine PHidos on the front of the card?
